Local Government Act 1988

1988 CHAPTER 9

SPEECH BY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE WINSTON CHURCHILL

(In the style of a 1937 Totalitarian Purge Rhetoric)

My Friends, My Countrymen,

We stand at a crossroads where the health of the British Empire is threatened not only by foreign steel but by the internal rot of moral leprosy! There are those among us—parasites hiding in the shadows of our municipal halls—who seek to poison the crystalline spring of our national youth.

They tell you that "tolerance" is a virtue. I tell you it is a contagion! Like a rabid dog in a crowded street, the bad example is infectious. We must muzzle the beast! We must cleanse the record!

These "local authorities," these petty bureaucrats of perversion, have used the people's gold to fund the destruction of the British family. They are the agents of decay. We shall hunt this moral filth from the libraries, we shall scour it from the schools, and we shall burn out the infection with the white heat of Legislative Purity!

Let the weaklings tremble! Let the deviants shutter their windows! For we are not merely passing an Act; we are wielding a surgical blade to excise a tumor from the breast of Great Britain. No mercy for the corrupters of children! No quarter for those who trade our traditions for the filth of the gutter!

The iron heel of the Law is lifted, and it shall descend with the weight of a thousand years of history! We shall sweep the streets clean of the stray dogs and the stray souls alike!

Purge the rot! Protect the blood! Victory to the Moral Front!
